ored the visiting British delegation at a luncheon in the Ritz-Cariton at 1 o'clock. Mr. Depew, in one of his speeches, bristling, as of old, with wit and humor, wove about the brows of the Pilgrim Fathers the conventional laurel, halling them as pleneers in civil and religious tolerance. The next speaker, Sir Arthur Everett Shipley, vice-chancellor of the University of Cambridge, who is a member of the visiting delegation, punctured some sectors of that halo.

He was convinced, Sir Arthur said, that most of the Pilgrim Fathers all of whom were under 32 years of age when the Mayflower sailed, were lured to America in the spirit of adventure, ther so dominant throughout Europe, rather than in the pious quest of civil and re-ligious liberty. There were only three college bred men in the lot, added the
